

If the FCC deems changes to Element 1 desirable, it should modify it to require equivalent knowledge of technically current digital communications techniques. Simple elimination of Element 1 just makes it easier to obtain an amateur license, and that should not be the goal.